

David T. Eisenhauer

Office of Public Affairs

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service

4401 N. Fairfax Drive, MS 330

Arlington, VA 22203

703 358-2284

David_eisenhauer@fws.gov

David Eisenhauer is a public affairs specialist in the Fish and Wildlife Service's Headquarters Region, David is a Wyoming native who earned a bachelor's degree in journalism from the University of Wyoming. After several years of reporting and editing for newspapers in Florida, Wyoming and Ohio, he earned a master's degree in journalism from The Ohio State University as one of eight fellows in the Kiplinger Public Affairs Reporting Program. David returned to Wyoming as an editor and investigative reporter for the Casper Star-Tribune (environment and education), and spent five years as a senior editor, writer and public affairs specialist at the University of Wyoming before joining the Service in 2005. In addition to his professional work, David has taught editing and writing courses at the University of Wyoming and The Ohio State University and has contributed essays to several publications, including Northern Lights and High Country News. He is currently focusing on climate change and landscape conservation issues with the Service.